

About

From the moment a child is diagnosed with a life-limiting or life-threatening condition, everything changes.

Richard House supports these children and their families to lead as positive and happy a life as possible when dealing with a life-limiting illness.

And these changes affect the whole family, which is why we feel it is vital to provide not only care to the child, but support to the whole family as well.

To provide this support our services range from

- * specialised clinical care,
- * to art, music and dance therapy - giving the child the opportunity to explore what is happening to them in a safe environment,
- * or enabling a child with sensory needs communicate through sound,
- * through to end of life care and pre and post bereavement support for all the family.

The needs of the children and their families will always remain at the centre of all we do, which is why our services remain free of charge to the families we support.

To continue to do this we rely on the generosity of donors for the majority of our funding.
